

walked up to Sergt. Tucker, and said excitedly: "I ain't dead. They say I'm dead. Do you think I was?" "Well, you look like a pretty lively corpse," said Sergt. Tucker. "Who are you?" "I'm Minnie Ivory," said the girl. "They say I was murdered, and I ain't. I'm respectable colored girl. I earn my living by working in a washhouse, and I want to be accused of being bad. I'm too young."

The sergeant promised he would have the body sent to the coroner's office, and she left the station-house. She said that she was the Ivory girl from Rahway, called at the morgue this afternoon and positively identified the murdered woman as one who had just moved over the Pioneer Club in Bleeker street, between Mungo and Minetta streets.

Miss Gladstone Convincs Collector Kilbreth of an Outrage.

Seizures of Baggage Made Without Color of Authority.

Errors in Measurement Made to Keep Up the Trick.

What appears to be a regular scheme to make seizures from steamship passengers "stick," was brought to light through an investigation Collector Kilbreth concluded at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

For some time past the methods used by the inspectors of Surveyor McGuire's staff in making seizures, have aroused a suspicion in the Collector's Department, that all was not exactly as it should be, and of late a quiet investigation of the work of the inspectors on the docks has been going on.

Many complaints of abuse and unwarranted seizures have been made to the Collector and the Treasury officials in Washington.

In the case of several seizures all but one were released by the Collector. This belonged to Miss Delta Dioctre, who arrived on the steamship Majestic on March 21. Miss Gladstone had three trunks, two of which were filled with money and wraps, suitable for a person of means.

It was her first visit to this country and naturally she was a little bewildered on the dock. She was pointed up by Deputy Surveyor Dowling and some of his assistants, and charged with being a drowsy, listless person. In her sworn affidavit to-day Miss Gladstone stated that several of the customs officers made remarks about her being a relative of the "Grand Old Man." When she replied she was Irish, not English, they told her the Irish were good at putting up jobs, and she couldn't hold them.

Mr. Dowling and his men took the passenger they knew Miss Gladstone was bringing the documents to the bottom. Some one else, while the trunk were being examined another woman, a maid, was brought in and examined by the watching inspectors, and when it was announced that the duty would be $50, this second woman walked to the counter and paid the amount under protest, and that any payment was final. This was a false statement.

The trunk was sent to the seizure-room and a woman employed by the Surveyor to measure the gowns and make a record of the value. The sworn report was turned over to the Collector.

Today he played his cards in this game and won. He had Miss Gladstone come to his private office, and in the presence of three women employees of the Surveyor and the woman who made the measurement, he took off every garment.

The atrocity of the crime, as well as the mystery which surrounds it, has been the subject of much talk. No one has been able to probe it to the bottom. Nothing has created such a stir since the mysterious disappearance of the Frenchman Fourtouin, for whom the Algerian, Ben Ali, alias "Frenchy" was finally imprisoned for life. It relates to the secret of the "Drappeau" and the atrocities of the "Drappeau" and other mysterious bands who have made fallen women their special victims.

Trial of the Body.

The bundle containing the woman's mutilated remains was found shortly after daylight yesterday morning on the Little glass plot in front of the Bank Note Company at the corner of Franklin at the Charles street station-house. It was found that her legs had been amputated at the knees, and that she had been strangled, as a piece of cheesecloth was found tightly tied around her neck.

This kind of cloth is frequently used by women to bind note books for writing off the plates.

Whether the queen in question came from the New York Bank Note Company building or not, is yet to be determined.

There was a dead body in her suit, as the man who had come to do the task.

Besides the memorandum, the bundle contained a bottle of gin, a bag of salt and an old shirt.

Held to Have Been Killed Out of a Cow.

From the fact that so many persons saw the body yesterday, but were unable to identify it Police Capt. Delaney is of the opinion that the victim was a stranger to the city, and that the crime was committed out of town.

One theory is that the woman was murdered in Jersey City last Saturday night, and the body was brought to this city in a wagon by way of the Christopher street ferry.

It may have been a milk wagon, for many years ago a milk wagon, key place early in the morning from the ferry, and in that case it would have been broken.

The police agreed that it would have been impossible for any one to have carried such a bulky bundle through the city, and that it must have been stopped by the policemen on beat.

On the other hand, it could have been brought to the place where it was found, strapped to a chair, and the intention, if the body had been brought across the ferry, to throw it over the river and watch for the first available boat.

Easy to Get Out of.

Officer John Saman, of the Charles street station, who patrolled that post on Sunday morning after midnight, had best which extended from Beekman street to the Hudson river, and he would have been the easiest target in the world to have deposited the body in the little rear-way without his seeing it, and in most cases he would have passed it a dozen times afterwards in the dark without noticing it.

A resolution was introduced at a meeting of the Board of Aldermen this afternoon proposing to the government of the city to appropriate the money necessary to lease a plot to excavate the scene of the shooting at the place where the body was found.

Right Pier Officers Chosen.

The Board of Directors of the Brooklyn Pier Association held their annual meeting at the Pier Office yesterday, and the officers and Board of Directors elected last year President John H. Hoffman, Vice-President Alon C. Washington, Director John C. Hoffman, Alon C. Washington, Honorary Secretary and Trustee James P. Peck, and James M. C. Mulligan, chief all to the Pier.

Body Was Found.

This morning the lower part of Sixth avenue was crowded with people, and the story of the horrible crime stopped at the Pier Association office at the Hotel Metropole, and people gathered outside to see what had occurred.

One man had drawn a circle with the point of his umbrella on the earth within, which was supposed to mark the spot where the ghastly bundle had been found.

All the morning long a line of morose curiosity seekers hung over the railing in the drizzling rain, and whenever there was a lull in the crowd the place was quickly taken. Sometimes the line was three or four deep.

At noon, when he held an inquest into the cause of the death of the woman on Thursday at 3 o'clock A.M.

Among the dozen people who called to see the Morgue this morning was one negro who said he thought he recognized her name.

The man was from Newark, and he said that she had it in mind also to live there, and that she had been there a month ago. Since then she has not been heard of.

He could not tell his name or that of the girl. He went back to Newark and said he would return this afternoon.

Inspector McAvoy, of the Central Police station, had been to the station-house before noon, and had a conference with the police.

When Capt. Delaney was seen later he said that the mystery had not yet been solved and that the police had nothing to go on. He said that they were working on several theories, any one of which might lead to the unravelling of the mystery.
